About Hey Sid

Hey Sid builds Sid, an account-based marketing platform that helps B2B companies identify their ideal customers, reach the decision-makers inside them, and run and measure advertising campaigns across LinkedIn, Meta and other platforms.

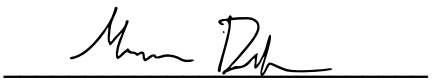

What she worked on

Chandrika worked as a full-stack engineer on the product and tech team, owning tasks end to end, scoping the work with stakeholders, building it, writing tests, taking it through peer review, and following it into production.

Ways of working

She was a full member of the development team, taking part in standups, planning, mob programming, and retrospectives, and reviewing her colleagues' code as well as her own. She communicated clearly with stakeholders across product, design, and operations, raised questions and blockers early, worked independently with little supervision, and closed out all of her open tasks before finishing.
